OUR TELOK AYER STORIES

Inspired by lesser-known histories of the heritage district, Our Telok Ayer Stories brings together creative works and community activities to rediscover one of Singapore's oldest streets. From open houses to art experiences on closed roads, join us in exploring the past, present and future of Telok Ayer.

ABOUT TELOK AYER

In the past, Telok Ayer was situated along the old shoreline of Singapore and was a landing ground for immigrants, hence giving its name Telok Ayer in Malay which translates to "bay" and "water". Hokkiens, being the first and the most numerous of the Chinese to arrive on the island, dominated the 'landing' area around Telok Ayer. This is also evident in the names of the streets in the area, for example Amoy Street was named after Amoy, now known as Xiamen, the major trading port-city of Hokkien (Fujian) Province.

Given the congregation of Chinese immigrants, it led to a concentration of temples and clan associations in the area. Some of these clan associations include Singapore Hokkien Huay Kuan, the Ying Fo Fui Kuan – a Hakka clan association, and Keng Teck Whay – a welfare association set up by 36 Hokkien families who came down from Malacca.

CURATED BY

OUR GRANDFATHER STORY

Our Grandfather Story is a digital video publisher that documents, curates and retells authentic stories. Since 2017, we've journeyed across Singapore and beyond to uncover everything from the origins of local childhood treats to no-holds-barred conversations with persons with disabilities – and we've barely scratched the surface.

Treading the thin line between old and new, between classic and contemporary, we present overlooked narratives that are timeless, nostalgic, and yet able to spark a sense of delight.
